Webinar programme

8 February 2024 | Teaching for the Young Learner Exams - a focus on reading skills

In this session we will focus on the Reading and Writing paper for each of the three levels (Pre A1 Starters, A1 Movers, A2 Flyers) of the Young Learners Exam (YLE). We will look at the role of YLE tests in developing reading skills with ideas and activities for the classroom. We will look at the excellent resources from Cambridge available to teachers to help students on their journey to success.

15 February 2024 | Teaching for A2 Key & B1 Preliminary for Schools - a focus on reading skills

This session looks at how teachers can prepare their candidates in the best way possible for A2 Key and B1 Preliminary exams, with a particular focus on the reading paper. We will explore the different strategies and approaches and will share some interesting tips on how you get the best out of your students in the reading parts. This 60-minute session features a wealth of examples and real-exam questions from the experts at Cambridge.

22 February 2024 | Teaching for B2 First for Schools - a focus on reading skills

In this third Cambridge session, we will start by looking at the different cognitive processes that students need to be able to answer B2 First reading questions compared to the lower CEFR levels. We will explore the various reading approaches and how these can be taught in the classroom using extra resources from Cambridge. We will offer free tips and advice on how best to maximise your students' potential.

29 February 2024 | Teaching for C1 Advanced & C2 Proficiency - a focus on reading skills

This final fourth session looks at how teachers can prepare their candidates in the best way possible for C1 and C2 exams, with a particular focus on the reading paper. We will explore the different cognitive strategies and approaches and will share some interesting tips on how you get the best out of your students in the reading parts. This 60-minute session features a wealth of examples and real-exam questions from the experts at Cambridge.
