A bad night's sleep

It was a very cold night in the forest. An explorer, Jean, was alone in her tent when something cold fell onto her _____. She climbed out of her sleeping bag and picked up her torch/flashlight. When she opened her tent, she saw that it was snowing. A lot! When she looked at her tent, she saw a hole in the roof. The snow was falling into her tent!

Jean went to her _____ and took the _____, it was very cold! She also found a plastic sheet in the rucksack/backpack and put it over the hole. The snow wasn't falling into the tent any more. 'Now I can go back to sleep,' she thought.

She was very tired and her back was hurting because her rucksack/backpack was very heavy so she put the _____ under the rucksack/backpack, too.

When she was back in her sleeping bag, she heard something strange. It was very quiet, but it was inside the tent. She held her _____ and turned it on. She couldn't see anything but the sound was still there. She moved towards her rucksack/backpack and the sound got louder. Something was in her rucksack/backpack! She opened her rucksack/backpack and saw a little mouse eating her biscuits, crunch, crunch, crunch. She didn't want to put the mouse outside in the snow, so she let it eat her biscuits. 'Snow in my _____, heavy rucksacks/backpacks, mice ...', she thought. 'Why am I an explorer?'
